

Organist David Lines

David M. Lines is an award-winning organist hailing from Seattle, Washington where he first took piano and organ lessons from his mother Emeline. David began his professional career playing for Christian Science churches under the direction of his 2nd teacher and mentor, Charles Wassberg, studying organ with him at Central Lutheran Church in downtown Seattle.

After winning a scholarship to Brigham Young University, David earned his Bachelor's degree in organ performance. He was an active recitalist throughout the state of Utah and was given the opportunity to present concerts on the famous Mormon Tabernacle organ. David next studied under Craig Cramer at the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Indiana, where he was awarded a full scholarship and assistantship, learning liturgy and playing Catholic masses as well.

David has served at many churches and denominations including a synagogue in Salt Lake City, Seattle, and Southern California. He began his tenure at Holy Trinity Lutheran Church in February 2024 where he is thrilled to play the legacy organ, working closely with Leek Pipe Organ Company to make necessary repairs and improvements.
